REPUBLICAN NOMINATION.

FOR GOVERNOR,

SELDEN CONNOR,

OF AUGUSTA.

"THE GLORIOUS FOURTH."

We are drawing close upon the Centennial era and this ninety-ninth anniversary of the Glorious Fourth should borrow some of the enthusiasm of the great National Jubilee of next year. The demonstrations this year may not be extensive or imposing in all localities but the recent celebrations of the early struggles of our fathers for independence invest the date of the Great Declaration with a fresh significance, and it may safely be said that to-day the people at large invest the occasion with more of the spirit of '76 than has been the case for years

In our own city the event will be most appropriately signalized by the entertainment provided by the ladies in behalf of the great project of an international celebration next year. Every citizen of the United States, and especially of New England must feel a pride in having the one hundredth anniversary of our National independence celebrated on a scale befitting the event, and the marvellous progress of the model Republic. The efforts of our patriotic ladies should, therefore, be liberally and cordially sustained by the public, and we hope that the results of the Centennial Entertainment to-day will be worthy of Bangor of the Fourth of July and of the magnificent National enterprise in whose behalf it has been projected

The simple but grand lessons of this day are the duty and the beauty of loyal to our country, of willingness to defend it at every sacrifice, of faithfulness and loyalty in days of darkness and trial. Those lessons have found a new and glorious interpretation in the second great struggle for National existence, and in honoring those heroes who fought for our independence, the people will also remember those who but recently added a new page of glory to our country's history by achieving the great triumph which established the principles of the immortal Declaration, in letter and in spirit, as the foundation of the Government of the People

We celebrate not only National independence but freedom in its broadest and noblest sense, a citizenship which carries its guarantees of privilege and right to every corner of the Union and a fundamental law which at last embodies the great doctrine of "equal and exact justice to all men"

THE BROOKLYN TRIAL.

[From the Boston Advertiser]

The expected announcement that the Brooklyn jury had failed to agree was made yesterday, and the long-suffering prisoners were allowed to return to their families. The task imposed upon them was without a precedent and the length to which they took it bore testimony to the earnestness with which they desired to return a verdict, if it was possible. But that they should fail is not surprising. The community in which the trial was held has been for months divided into hostile camps, and both sides have been alternately exalted and depressed at the varying phases of the trial It would have been little less than a miracle if the jury had not been moved to some extent by the same influences and in the same way

Will this be the end of the prosecution? There can be no doubt of it. The plaintiff and those who were behind him staked everything upon this cast, and they have lost. That at least will be the judgment of impartial persons who have followed the trial They have exhausted their own testimony they have exhausted all that human ingenuity could do to break the force of the defence, and they have failed. Another trial would be but a repetition of this one, under less favorable circumstances. The attempt to throw manufactured evidence into the case after it had been given to the jury, whether Tilton and his friends were behind it or not, has still further weakened them and would be a great embarrassment to them in any renewal of the fight

Henceforward the paths of these famous suitors lie in opposite directions, and it would be a strange fortune that should ever again bring them together To any casual observer the fate of the plaintiff seems be most tragic, his suit for damages lost, his reputation injured beyond recovery, his household broken up and scattered, the friends of his youth alienated, and the bitter contempt of many of them following him into the retirement which awaits him As a partial offset to this desponding outlook, he still has youth, elasticity of spirit vanity, which though severely tried, has probably not wholly deserted him, and a certain intellectual energy which is not without admirers. There may also be, in a cosmopolitan city like New York, new phases of social interest to which talents like his may be serviceable, and in which he may find abundant sedatives to remorse

The famous preacher, on the other hand, whom a year ago this foolish knight-errant rode out to destroy, is surrounded and upheld by the devotion of his family and his people—apparently more fervent and aggressive now than at the beginning If he cannot go before the public with a sense of triumph which a clear verdict of acquittal would have given him, he still has the evidence of their justification, while abroad he will find most of the avenues to popular favor and popular applause as widely opened to him as ever. That will be no slight consolation after the tortures of the last year, and it may compensate in some measure for the sting of the shoulder, the averted faces or the cavilling speech, which will be sure now and then to confront him when he is least expecting them.

Even this may be a hard penalty to pay for want of wisdom in dealing with his assailants. The penalty may be remitted in another world. But it is not the way of this one.

[From the Boston Globe]

The great scandal trial has come to an end, at least for the present, by the disagreement and discharge of the jury. We cannot but regret that a more decisive conclusion was not reached, and the ground furnished for a final settlement of the question in the public mind. After what had preceded the giving of the case to the jury, a verdict would not have completely settled it and been universally accepted as establishing the truth; but it would have furnished a basis on which to let the matter rest. As it is, we are practically left where we were at the beginning of the trial A great mass of conflicting evidence has been given in Court, the hearing has been discussed by able lawyers, the principles on which it was to be weighed were clearly set forth by the Judge, and yet twelve men who had given their whole time and attention to it for six months, we have no doubt, honestly and earnestly confess their inability to agree as to the state of facts shown by that evidence.

* * * * * * *

It is hard to avoid the conclusion that there was something wrong, more than the defendant has ever been willing to admit, and less than the plaintiff has tried to make it out. That this wrong is a criminal wrong we never for a moment have believed: that Mr. Beecher is guilty of the specific charge that Mr. Tilton has brought against him we cannot believe, and further more we have seen nothing of substantial evidence to prove it; that Mr. Tilton believes him guilty of it, we have ever believed him guilty of it, we do not and have not believed. But that something has been said or done by Mr. Beecher to compromise himself and put him in the power of Mr. Tilton is sufficiently apparent. We wish he could see it and be induced by his friends to draw the veil from his history, whatever what the consequences, no matter what "hearts are made to bleed by it" As it stands now there is a stain upon his reputation. Though there are thousands of his best citizens in the community who are firm in their conviction that he is guiltless of the grave charge against him, the mystery enveloping his case annoys and troubles them and its influence is bad. He cannot afford to let the matter rest here.

Gen. Z. A. Smith, of the Portland Press, comes out with a letter addressed to Gen. Roberts, the democratic candidate for governor, which can hardly fail to weigh heavily against him in the ranks of the soldiers. Indeed we query whether the democrats of Maine will not find it a good cause to regret that they attempted to gain favor with the soldiers by nominating a military man. The letter is strongly framed, and its queries are absolutely unanswerable. It begins with respectful mention of Gen. R's enlistment in connection with an independent company to which he belonged; giving him credit for well doing up to the unfortunate days of Gen. Fitz John Porter, with whose disgrace he charges him with too much fellowship;—touches his resignation and withdrawal from the service in the gloom of '62, and his subsequent association with Emery and Pillsbury in opposing the draft and discouraging the soldiers he left behind him in the field. It is a fatal shot, well aimed, and the ball will "pocket ed."—Waterville Mail.

The Portland Press says Murat Halstead has done a very imprudent thing indeed. He has dubbed rag-money "confederate currency." The Western Democrats were decided inflationists before, and it is now to be feared that the adoptation of Eastern Democrats for confederate and all that the name implies," will lead them to eagerly adopt the financial heresy.

A very full abstract of President Chamberlain's Baccalaureate Address, delivered on Sunday afternoon, will be found on our first page to-day.

GRASSHOPPERS IN BOSTON. The Journal says: We did not anticipate that Boston proper would ever be inconvenienced by the pests which have proved so destructive out West, but it is a fact that grasshoppers are so numerous at the South End that they destroy the flowers in the back yards to such an extent that trees recently bought to clear the premises and save ornamental plants which adorn the premises These insects are not of the Western pattern, but are native productions. If their ravages continue, it is possible some of our Western friends will be called upon to raise subscriptions for the relief of the horticulturists of Boston.

BOWDOIN COMMENCEMENT

Programme for the Week—Large Attendance Expected—The Class of 1850, etc., etc

[FROM OUR SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT]

BRUNSWICK, July 3.

An unusually large attendance is expected at Commencement this year as the attractions are very great. It is stated upon good authority that Prof. Longfellow will be present, and he has consented to depart from his life long custom and read his poem. The following is the programme for the week.

Monday night, Prize Declamation by the Junior class Tuesday night, Gymnastic Exhibition, Wednesday, Meeting of the Alumni Association in the forenoon and Poem by H W. Longfellow, LL. D., and Oration by G B Cheever, D D., in the afternoon. In the evening there will be a concert at which Miss Anne Louise Cary is to sing for the last time in the State before her departure for Europe Commencement Day. Friday, the Phi Beta Kappa fraternity will hold their annual meeting The annual meeting of the Maine Historical Society will also be held In the afternoon the examination of candidates for admission to the several classes There is a prospect of a large Freshman class, as the applications for information and catalogues has been unusually large. The famous class of '25 hold their semi-centennial reunion this year. The classes of '51, '55 and '70 also hold reunions. The graduating class met Saturday morning, filled vacancies and a majority is in favor of holding class day exercises on Friday, which will probably be done

Prof J. S Sewall has accepted a call from the Bangor Theological Seminary, and will resign at the coming meeting of the Boards Prof White has already sent in his resignation He is engaged in Government work at the West under Major Powell It has not yet been decided who shall fill the above vacancies.

The University crew left for Saratoga last Friday. They are all in good spirits and good muscle. Although the crew does not expect to cross the line first, they hope to be counted among the firs. They have had to work against many disadvantages such as lack of funds, poor boats to practice in and the difficulties attending these They certainly deserve the highest commendation for the pluck they have shown in their training. About Lightning Rods.

To the Editor of the Whig and Courier

In the July number of the Atlantic Monthly in an exceedingly interesting and instructive article on "Lightning and Lightning Rods," by John Trowbridge, the following statement is made: "We have not, indeed, secured absolute safety from the ravages of lightning, even by our most improved systems of lightning-rods." Without questioning the general truthfulness of this statement, it may not be uninteresting to the citizens of Bangor to be reminded that a system of applying rods for the protection of buildings from lightning was devised in this very city, more than half a century ago, which has been extensively used ever since, especially in New York and vicinity, and in all these years has never once failed. The inventor of this system was A. M. Quimby, alluded to, in one of the Bangor "Centennial" poems:

"Last preceptor Quimby came,
With prospects ever brightening,
Until, at length he made himself
Director of the lightning."

Mr Quimby, was a brother of Mrs. Garland, whose husband, kept the Franklin House many years ago. He married a sister of Samuel and Henry Call. In the regular course of his teachings in Bangor, he became interested in electricity, and subsequently in the city of New York, devoted himself to the business of erecting lightning rods. His only son, Edward E. Quimby, born in Bangor now of Orange, New Jersey, inheriting his father's peculiar talent, has carried on the business in New York city and vicinity with entire success, without a failure, for many years, having retired from it, of late, passing it over to other hands for the sake of devoting himself to other business, which has gradually accumulated upon him, that of an "Expert in Patent cases."

Never a building "protected" on the Quimby plan,—I might say, on the Bangor plan,—has been injured. On the Quimby system the main question is not the shape of the rod,—though it prefers the square, with its four sharp edges,—nor the amount, as dictated by the size and form of the building, and a sufficient number of connections with the ground. The Franklin is a progressive unnecessary and costly, if not injurious. I does not object to "gold tips," for those who have gold to spare, would even prefer that the entire rod should be gold, but considers cast iron is sufficient for the safe conduct of the lightning, and at the same time less attractive to burglars. No mere mechanic can protect a building; only one who understands the science of the subject. So much in behalf of the claims of Bangor.

The German commissioner to the American Centennial desires consent to affix prices to goods.

A Down Town Merchant,

Having passed several sleepless nights, disturbed by the moaning and cries of a suffering child, and becoming convinced that MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP was just the article needed, procured a supply for the child. On retiring before, had acquainted his wife with what he had done she refused to have it administered to the child, as she was strongly in favor of Homeopathy. That night the child passed in suffering, and the parents without sleep. Retiring home the day following the father found the baby still worse; and while contemplating another sleepless night, the mother slipped from the room to attend to some domestic duties, and left the father with the child. During her absence he administered a portion of the Soothing Syrup to the baby, and said nothing. That night all hands slept well, and the little fellow awoke in the morning bright and happy The mother was delighted with the result and wondered aloud, and although at first frightened at the deception practiced upon her, was convinced to use the Syrup, and declaring, crying babies and restless nights have disappeared. A single trial of the Syrup never yet failed to relieve the baby, and overcome the prejudices of the mother.

Terrific Explosion in Ellsworth!

STANDISH & PIERCE'S FOUNDRY DEMOLISHED!

TWO MEN AND A LITTLE GIRL BADLY INJURED!

The Whole Town Startled—The Fireman's Statement

[SPECIAL TO THE WEEKLY AND COURIER.]

ELLSWORTH, July 3. This usually quiet little city was very much startled this afternoon by the terrific explosion of the boiler in Standish & Pierce's foundry, which occurred at twenty minutes past 3 o'clock just as the workmen were preparing to melt iron to fill their moulds. The engineer was absent, and the engine was in charge of fireman Jordan, who states that the steam gauge indicated seventy-five pounds pressure and steam was escaping from the safety-valve, which was set to "blow off" at seventy pounds, when he thread it on to run the blast for the purpose of melting.

Terrific Explosion.

Instantly there was a terrific explosion and he knew no more until picked up by people who had been driven to the spot by the earthquake-like report which resulted in a man standing about two feet from the side of the boiler, which blew out sideways, landing him among the debris senseless, and seriously bruised though with no bones broken.

Probably Fatally Injured.

The roof of the building rose, as is said, about thirty feet in the air, and came down about that distance to one side. At the time of the explosion, Samuel Moore was on the roof coming through for a skylight, and he shot up faster and higher than the roof, coming down among the hot iron, bricks and other debris, and though no bones were broken, he is considered to be fearfully injured by the terrible burns and bruises he received.

Fortunate Escape.

But two or three minutes before the explosion let on the steam, the other workmen had passed from the engine-room to the other building where was the moulding-room and where the furnace was situated and escaped injury, though the side of this building was blown out.

A Little Girl Seriously Injured.

A little girl twelve years old, daughter of James Graham, nearly an eighth of a mile away, was struck in the forehead by a brick and seriously though it is hoped not fatally injured.

Houses Damaged.

So great was the force of the explosion that windows of houses in every direction were shattered and for a few minutes there was the will but excitement.

The Boiler

was one of Sellin's 1871 patent, put in just one week ago, and at one hundred pounds, and as before stated, if the steam gauge is correct, was under only seventy-five pounds pressure—not enough to work the six horse power engine. The engineer left it in charge of the fireman as I stated, and at the time of the explosion the latter states that there was no lack of water and no indications of any thing wrong, so it is not yet definitely settled what caused the calamity.

The Damage.

It is not possible at this time to obtain accurately the amount of the damage, which will be considerably more than the value of the property destroyed, as the replacing of the buildings and machinery will require some time during which the business of the firm will be at a stand-still.

VINCENT.

FROM PORTLAND.

On investigation they learned that correspondents in Troy, Baltimore, New-ark, New London, Hartford, and other places had duly mailed out to them, but that their remittances had not been received. FESTIVAL AT NOROMBEGA HALL.

The ladies here have been preparing an entertainment at Normbega Hall that deserves the patronage of everyone who remains in town, and those who are planning to go elsewhere to celebrate would do well to change plans and contribute to their own comfort and to the Centennial fund at the same time, by patronizing the patriotic festival. You can give the cook a holiday and take your meals at the hall, listen to charming music, enjoy oratorical utterances appropriate to the occasion, eat strawberries and ice-cream and drink lemonade to your heart's content. For an opportunity to do all this what descend into of his Revolutionary sires, what citizen of this glorious Republic, would not gladly sacrifice the paltry sum of fifteen cents!

The hall will be handsomely decorated, and will be open from 12 o'clock, noon, till 9.30 P. M. At 12 o'clock lunch will be served, including strawberries and cream; at 1 o'clock a substantial dinner will be ready; at 3.30 o'clock, the children's concert will be given; at 7 o'clock supper will be served; at 8 o'clock the exercises of the day will appropriately conclude with speeches from distinguished citizens, and the reading of an original ode by Mrs. B.
